

MEET BETH MAUGHAN

"We always seemed to have some kind of project going on when our children were growing up. We painted, we danced, we sang, we dressed up, we molded clay, and we made all kinds of creations out of what other people call junk. What would have been a mess to some moms, was a creative delight to me."

Beth graduated with a degree in Interior Design, but then she got busy with five children. When her children were older, she went back to school for a teaching degree in art and worked for Ogden City Schools as an Elementary Art Specialist. Beth left teaching for a while to be the Northern Utah Area Director for Sen. Robert F. Bennett and worked for him during his first term. Later she taught at Horace Mann Elementary. She also earned her Masters in Educational Counseling. And she was involved in Treehouse. "When Treehouse first opened, I was hired by Lynne to do Double Decker Night once a week. I prepared very low budget activities that could be done with children and their parents and taught them on the Utah Map. We didn't have an Art Garden then." Beth has also served on the Board of Treehouse Children's Museum.
